Key Takeaways

Domestic small distribution boxes typically range in price based on amperage, material, and features, with options available from $15 to $150 per unit depending on specifications and supplier.

Domestic small distribution boxes are designed for residential and light commercial electrical installations, offering safe and efficient power distribution. Prices vary depending on amperage ratings (32A to 125A), number of circuits, material (thermoplastic or metal), IP rating, and additional safety features such as residual current protection and surge protection .

- Surface-mounted vs. flush-mounted: Surface-mounted boxes are generally more affordable, while flush-mounted options may cost more due to installation complexity and aesthetics .
- Standard vs. premium models: Standard models start around $15-$30, while premium models with advanced safety features and higher circuit capacity can reach $100-$150 per unit .

- Bulk orders: Many suppliers offer discounts for volume purchases, which is beneficial for contractors or distributors .

Supplier Options

- China: Comprehensive price lists and technical specifications are available from suppliers like Chineng Electric, offering detailed information on amperage, IP ratings, and material composition .

- India: Suppliers such as R.S.V Plast, Harshita Electricals, and Sanlec Automation provide domestic distribution boxes with quick response and bulk order support .

Key Considerations

When selecting a domestic small distribution box, consider:

- Amperage and circuit capacity to match your electrical load.

- Safety features like RCDs, surge protection, and proper earthing.
- Mounting type (surface or flush) and installation requirements.
